- Any variation to these Conditions which have been incorporated into the Contract or to the Contract shall only be binding when agreed in writing and signed by you and us.
- Delivery
 - The Goods will be delivered to you at the address you provided during the order process which may be an address other than the billing address.

What to do with your documents

This following pages are to help you - you should separate them from the previous pages.

Terms and conditions

The first document is the terms and conditions for supplying goods and services to consumers. It should be uploaded onto and used in conjunction with your website. On your website you should describe the goods and services that you are supplying and state the prices and other specific details.

Before your customers place their order and click on your 'Pay Now' button, there should be a link to these terms and conditions. Alternatively your customer should have to scroll through them. There should then be an 'I accept' checkbox referring to these terms and conditions. Your website should not allow your customer to proceed with the order unless they have ticked the 'I accept' checkbox.

There is other 'pre-contract information' that you must provide to the consumer before they make the contract - we have summarised this in the checklist on the next page. We recommend that you provide this information on your website and in the confirmation notice (see below) to the extent that it is not already provided in the terms and conditions and to the extent that it applies to the particular goods/services being offered.

After you have decided to accept the order, send the consumer a confirmation notice on a 'durable medium' e.g. by email or post. If you have not yet provided the pre-contract information on a durable medium, you must include it in your confirmation notice. You must send this confirmation notice to the consumer within a reasonable time after the contract is made, and before delivering the goods or starting performance of the services.

Cancellation form

The second document is the model cancellation form that you must provide to your customer along with your confirmation of the order (confirmation notice). You could provide the cancellation form by uploading it onto your website and providing a link to it in the confirmation notice. Alternatively, you could provide it as an email attachment or enclose it in a confirmation notice sent by post. The customer does not have to use it, and may cancel by clearly indicating to you that they wish to do so. If the customer completes and submits the cancellation form to you online, you must send them an acknowledgement of receipt on a durable medium without delay.

Checklist of pre-contract information to be supplied to your customer

If you are selling goods and/or services to a consumer via a distance contract, you must give the consumer certain information before they place the order. You must provide this information in a clear, prominent manner that is appropriate to contracting via a website. You should also repeat the information in the order confirmation notice. This is usually an email sent to confirm that you are dispatching the goods or will perform the services. The confirmation notice must be in a durable medium, i.e. on paper, by email or in a form that allows the consumer to store and reproduce it. Note that these terms and conditions are not appropriate for contracts of indeterminate duration or subscription contracts.

The information that must be given to the consumer before they place the order is:

- A description of the main characteristics of the Goods and Services
- The total price, including all taxes, or the manner in which the price is to be calculated if the nature of the goods or services means it cannot be calculated in advance
- Delivery and any other costs, where appropriate
- The duration of the contract and minimum duration of the customer's obligations under the contract.
- Whether any delivery restrictions apply and which means of payment are accepted.

In addition, before the consumer is bound by the contract, you must give them the model cancellation form set out in the CCR, a copy of which is found at the bottom of the terms and conditions and the following information. The information must be provided in a clear, comprehensible manner that is appropriate to contracting via a website. It is best to provide this information along with the information mentioned above on the website before the customer places the order. However, you could provide it after the order. At the very latest it must be provided in the confirmation notice.

- Your business name and the geographical address, telephone and fax numbers and e-mail address of your business (included - but we recommend that this is also provided on the website and in the confirmation notice).
- The name and geographical address of any trader you are acting on behalf of (not included - provide on your website and in the confirmation notice).
- How long prices quoted remain valid (not included - provide on your website)
- Arrangements for payment (included but also include on website and in the confirmation notice)
- Arrangements for the delivery of goods or performance of services, including the timeframe. You must deliver goods within 30 days of the purchase if you do not agree a longer timeframe with the customer. You must state any delivery restrictions clearly (not included - provide on your website and the confirmation notice)
- The cost to the customer of communicating with you to conclude the contract when it will be more than the basic rate (not included - provide on your website and in the confirmation notice). You are not allowed to charge the consumer premium telephone rates for any helplines you operate in relation to the contract (e.g. for customer queries, cancellations and complaints).

- If the consumer has a right to cancel, the time limit, conditions and procedures involved in exercising the right to cancel. (Included but you should also consider providing this on your website and a link to that page in the confirmation notice.)
- If you are providing services and the consumer wants you to start performing the services before the end of the cancellation period, you need to ensure you have a request from them and their acknowledgement that they will lose the right to cancel once you have fully performed the services
- Where there is no right to cancel or that right could be lost, a statement to this effect and the circumstances in which the right can be lost (included but provide on your website and in the confirmation notice.)
- That the consumer will have to pay for services received if they ask you to start performing during the cancellation period and then cancel after you have started
- Where the goods should be returned (not included. The terms say you will provide these details. You should do so on your website and in the confirmation notice.)
- That the consumer will have to bear the cost of returning the goods, if this is the case (not included - provide on your website and in the confirmation notice)
- The cost of returning the goods if regular post can't be used (not included - provide on your website and in the confirmation notice)
- Your complaints handling policy (not included, other than a term that customer should contact you. Include on website and in the confirmation notice)
- Details of any out-of-court complaints redress. If you are required to do so by legislation or any rules of your trade association, you must tell the consumer the name and website address of the certified ADR body to submit the dispute to. See below. (ADR provisions are included but also provide on your website and in the confirmation notice)
- If you are selling goods, a reminder that you have a duty to supply goods conforming to the contract (included, but also provide on your website and in the confirmation notice)
- Details of any guarantees or after-sales service (not included - provide on your website and in the confirmation notice)
- Which, if any, codes of conduct apply to you, and where the consumer can get copies (not included - provide on your website and in the confirmation notice)
- The existence and conditions of any deposits or other financial guarantees to be provided by the consumer (not included - provide on your website and in the confirmation notice)
- Your company registration number.
- Your VAT registration number.
- The technical steps that the customer must follow to conclude the contract.
- A description of the technical means for customers to identify and correct input errors prior to placing an order.
- Whether or not a copy of the contract will be kept by you and if so, if it can be accessed by the customer.
- The languages offered for the conclusion of the contract.
- Details of any professional liability insurance guarantee you may have including the contact details of the insurer or guarantor and the territorial coverage of the insurance or guarantee.
- The main features of the service if these are not apparent from the context.

- Any dispute resolution procedures provided by the professional regulatory body or under the code of conduct that governs your business.
